

EVENTS

Actually Fun Things To Do in Miami This Weekend

Catch a concert, hang by the pool, and see a new art exhibit.

Now that the water on your street is no longer at kayaking level, it's time to think about what to do during our first nice weekend not under the threat of a tropical storm. And since Miami is blazing its way back to a post-pandemic normal, perhaps this is the weekend you get back to bars, when the outdoor-and-socially-distant Wharf finally reopens. Still wanna stay at home? That's cool, you can bring Dee Dee Bridgewater into your living room Saturday, or just grab some free fro-yo to go from Todd Erickson's new spot. All that and free rooftop yoga highlight the best stuff going on in Miami this weekend.

Watch Will Smith and Kevin James under the stars

Friday, November 13

Maurice A. Ferre Park

Never mind we're still buying weekly storm stockpiles, it's finally nice weather again! We know because the Miami Downtown Development Authority is restarting its winter outdoor movie series. The first installment starts at 6pm with the romantic comedy Hitch. The show is free but you must RSVP, and bring your own blankets and chairs.

Cost: Free and RSVP here