10 Miami Art Week 2020 Events & Exhibits You Can Actually Enjoy

Art Basel 2020 is officially canceled, but Miami's artistic community thrives regardless.

From sunny skies to muraled walls, the Magic City stays picturesque 365 days a year. One can always take a stroll through the street art mecca of Wynwood's art district, but most of Miami's homegrown museums are open and exhibiting, too. There are even a few major art shows that pivoted to digital or socially-distanced events.

If you're a local looking to take advantage of an Art Week with less tourists, or a visitor who braved the trip who wants to make every second count, the city won't disappoint. From graffiti history to surrealist commentary, fashion, technology and more, these are the Miami Art Week events that 2020 couldn't cancel.

Flagler Street (NE 1st & 2nd Avenue)

This open-air fair celebrates art and fashion in the heart of Downtown. Sunday, Dec. 6, the street will be shut down to cars but open to the public with restaurants and bars and a theatrical runway experience courtesy of luxury fashion brand The Blonds. Models will walk from the beautiful Olympia Theater down a whole block on a transformed piece of Flagler Street. A strict seating limit will be adhered to for COVID safety, so get there early for the 6 p.m. welcome and VIP registration.
