'I love you, Miami.' Watch local rapper Flo Rida get key to the city on 125th birthday

Miami Mayor Francis Suarez presented Flo Rida with key to the City, in downtown Miami to celebrate the city's 125th birthday. BY VENTY MEDIA

Wednesday was a big night for the Magic City, Miami's 125th birthday. So it was only fitting that local rapper Flo Rida got some love, too.

Mayor Francis Suarez presented the Carol City native with a key to the city during a bash on Flagler Street in downtown Miami to celebrate the city's big day.

Hosted by the Miami Downtown Development Authority, Flagler Street went into full party mode, with politicians, rappers, singers and residents coming together for an evening of live music, food and an art display on the façade of the Miami-Dade County Courthouse.

The 41-year-old rap star, born Tramar Lacel Dillard, was ever grateful. On his Instagram, Flo posed with the symbolic key.

“To GOD be the glory THE KEY TO THE CITY!!! All I can say is ‘Wow’ and to receive it on the 125th anniversary of Miami, I couldn’t ask for a better setup,” said the “Low” singer’s caption. “I’m forever in debt to my city, I love you MIAMI. Thank you again to everyone, time to open more doors with this key.”

The post ended with the hashtag, #myhouse for his 2015 hit “Welcome to My House.”
